Using the Twilio API, I would like to get a string that I can use, for example "5:42 AM GMT ". My goal is that when the IP changes, it will update to the current time and send that string to my Twilio number. I'm not exactly sure where to begin and have had no luck Googling the answer. A: Twilio developer evangelist here. You'll want to store a variable in PHP for the last IP address logged using a read operation to the Twilio API and then also store a read on your IP address whenever it changes. Based on that reading, you can start an HTTP POST to the inbound URL you wish to track your IP. If you need more control, you can use the DTMF feature in the Twilio Client SDK. Differing roles of the two major v-rel oncogenes encoded by Moloney murine leukemia virus (Mo-MuLV). The mechanism by which cells become transformed by the v-rel oncogene is unknown. Previously, we reported that the very late antigens (V-LAs) encoded by the Mo-MuLV v-rel oncogene play an essential role in the transformed phenotype of v-rel-transformed cells. Here, we report that in NIH 3T3 cells bearing only the v-rel oncogene (NIH 3T3 v-rel), viral replication and the cell-fusing ability of v-rel differ depending on the presence of the V-LAs. Whereas the introduction of the V-LAs into NIH 3T3 cells completely inhibited the replication of the Mo-MuLV, the introduction of the V-LAs alone into v-rel-transformed NIH 3T3 cells did not suppress the replication of the Mo-MuLV and did not suppress the fusion activity of v-rel. These results indicate that V-LAs play a different role in regulating the replication and cell-fusing ability of the Mo-MuLV v-rel oncogene.
